DETAILED ACTION

0.1 This office action is in response to the amendment filed on 12/06/2006. Claims 5-12, 17 and 20 are amended. Claims 3, 19, 1-20 are pending.

Response to Amendment

1. The indicated allowability of claims 1-2, 5, 7, 12-18 and 20 is withdrawn in view of the newly discovered reference(s) to Pak et al. (U.S. Pat. No. 7,080,408) and Chelsa (US Pub. No. 2004/0250124 A1). Rejections based on the newly cited reference(s) follow.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-2, 4-18, 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chesla (US Pub. No. 20040250124 A1) in view of Pak et al. (U.S. Pat. No. 7,080,408).

As to claim 12, Chesla discloses a malicious code detection device including an intercept module for intercepting a request issuing on a host computer system prior to the sending of the request from the host computer system to a target computer system (see paragraph 0002); an analyzer module coupled to the intercept module (Paragraph [0031, 0046, 0353]); Chesla teaches a request database including one or more request entries (0024); and a standards list (500) coupled to the analyzer module, the standards list including selected standards for use in determining whether the request is suspicious (paragraph 0350).

Chesla does not explicitly disclose each of the one or more request entries identifying a request determined to be suspicious. However, the limitations are obvious and well known in the art, as evidenced by Pak (fig. 3; col. 6, lines 4-19).

Therefore, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art, at the time of the invention to combine Chesla's dynamic network device with the network security system, as disclosed by Pak. Doing so would provide a way to detect and temporarily detain potential infected data from a network data stream prior to the data reaching a client device.

As to claims 13-16, Chesla (figs 2-16) discloses a malicious code detection device comprising: an inclusion and exclusion profile list a memory area coupled to the intercept module includes an interception mechanism for intercepting a request.

As to claims 17 and 20, the claims differ from claim 12 by the additional limitations "A computer program product comprising a computer readable medium containing computer program code for a method comprising: stalling a request on a host computer system prior to sending the request to a target computer system." However, the limitations are clearly disclosed by Pak (fig. 3; col. 6, lines 4-19).

As to claim 18, the claim has substantially the limitations of claim 17, therefore, it is analyzed as disclosed in claim 17 above.

As to claims 1, 5 and 7, method claims 1, 5 and 7 correspond to apparatus claim 12; therefore, they are analyzed as disclosed in claim 12 above.

As to claims 2, 4, 6, 8, Chesla discloses a method, further comprising: wherein upon a determination that malicious code activity is detected, generating a notification that malicious code activity is detected; and implementing one or more protective actions (0035); and wherein upon a determination that the request is not suspicious, releasing the request (0329). Chesla discloses a method, wherein the implementing one or more protective actions comprises terminating the request (0426).

As to claims 9-11, Chesla does not explicitly disclose a method wherein the request is an HTTP GET request and wherein the intercepting a request on a host computer system utilizes a local proxy mechanism. However, the limitations are obvious and well known in the art, as evidenced by Mouhanna (U.S. Pat. No. 6,976,066). See (0010, 0072, 0170).

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-20 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

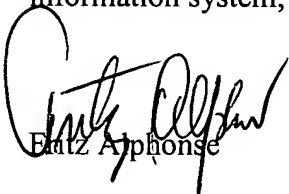

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. See PTO-892.
